INTRODUCTION

Finding a child care and development program that meets the needs of your child and family is a very important responsibility. It also can be a challenging and lengthy process. As parents, while you are going to school or working, you want to trust that the person or program you choose to care for your child is keeping her/him safe and healthy and nurturing your child’s growth and development. In addition, you want to share information with your child’s provider or program staff about your child’s progress and discuss ways that both of you can help your child grow and learn.

The Office of Child Care is delighted to offer you this Guide to Child Care and Development Programs (Guide). The Guide is designed to help you make informed decisions when looking for a child care and development program for your child and family. In addition, it may help you organize your important documents and information on your child so that it is readily available to you when you enroll your child into a child care and development program. Ultimately, the Guide is intended to help you in your search and selection of a high quality child care and development program that is the best fit for you and your family.

The Guide contains the following:

- Types of Child Care and Development Programs: a listing and brief description of the different types of child care and development programs.

- Using Your Local Child Care Resource and Referral Agency: a guide to prepare you for requesting referrals to child care and development programs, including information that you will want to share with the resource and referral specialist.

- Choosing a Quality Child Care and Development Program: a checklist of things to look for and ask when visiting prospective child care and development programs.
NOTES:

- Finding Help Paying for Care: provides information on three programs designed to connect eligible families with subsidized child care.

- Early Head Start Programs: an overview and listing of the Early Head Start Programs serving low-income pregnant women, infants, and toddlers from ages birth to three located in Los Angeles County.

- Head Start Programs: an overview and listing of the Head Start Programs serving low-income families with children from ages three to five located in Los Angeles County.

- Adolescent Family Life Programs: a listing of programs in Los Angeles County that provide case management services to pregnant and parenting teens, including assisting teens and their children connect to health and social services, as well as resources for finding and selecting a child care and development program.

- California School Age Families Education (Cal-SAFE): a listing of the Cal-SAFE programs, which help pregnant and parenting students succeed in school while providing child care and development services to their children.

- My Child Care Checklist: a checklist of documents and information that you will likely need to provide to the child care and development program you select.

- Important Information about My Child: a handy worksheet for you to record information about your child and use as a resource for the type of information you will need when you enroll your child.

- Southern California Child Care Resource and Referral Services: a map showing the location and service areas of the resource and referral agencies in Los Angeles County. This map will help you select the agency that serves the community in which you live, attend school, or work.

We hope you find this Guide helpful in your search for and participation in a high quality child care and development program. While parenting can be demanding, we hope your experiences are happy and rewarding.
TYPES OF CHILD CARE AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMS

Child care and development programs are offered in different settings, including family child care homes, centers, and schools. Most child care and development programs are required to have a license to operate by the State of California. While licensing is intended to ensure the basic health and safety of the children participating in the program, licensing alone does not guarantee that the program will help your child develop and grow.

Refer to Choosing a Quality Child Care and Development Program on page 9 of this Guide to help you ask the right questions when visiting a child care and development program to make sure that it is a good fit for your child and family.

Following is a list and brief description of the different types of child care and development programs:

Child Care and Development Center
Full- or part-day program that cares for infants and toddlers (birth to three years old), preschoolers (three to five year olds) and school age children (up to 13 years old) in a group setting. Centers may serve one age group or a combination of two or all three age groups, separating the children into classrooms by age groups.

Family Child Care Home
A family child care provider’s home is licensed to care for up to eight or 14 children from birth up to age 13, including the provider’s own children, in the provider’s home.

Early Head Start
Free comprehensive program for low-income pregnant women, infants, and toddlers from ages birth to three, including young children with disabilities. Services may be provided in the home of the family, a licensed family child care home, and/or a center. Comprehensive services include helping families get health, nutrition, and social services.

Head Start
Free part-day (3½ hours) comprehensive child development program for low-income and disabled preschoolers ages three to five years old living in the local community. Head Start generally operates from September to June. Families most in need, including families at risk and/or in crisis, four year-old children, and children with disabilities, receive priority for enrollment. Comprehensive services include social services, health, mental health, nutrition, and parent involvement.

State Preschool Programs
Free part-day (3½ hours) comprehensive child development program for three- to four-year-old children from low-income families living in the local community. State Preschool Programs generally operate from August through June or September through June. Families with open cases with the Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS) receive priority for enrollment, as space is available. State Preschool provides free meals and snacks, offers parent education, and encourages parent participation. Families are referred to health and social services, as needed.

Los Angeles Universal Preschool (LAUP)
Part-day (3½ hours) child development programs for four year old children regardless of family income. LAUP generally operates from September to June. LAUP is free to families receiving services and/or under the supervision of the DCFS and the Probation Department. Families not associated with DCFS or Probation may be required to pay an investment fee depending on their income and the program in which they enroll their child.

In-Home Care
Typically, in-home care occurs in the family's home or the home of the provider. In-home care is not licensed, therefore, it is essential for the parent or caregiver to make sure that the arrangement works.
School Age/Extended Care
A variety of programs offer supervision, recreation, and enrichment to children during out of school hours, including before and after school and during winter, spring, and summer breaks. Programs may be offered on the school campus or in another location, such as a park or community-based organization. Some programs are licensed, while others are regulated by other entities.

For referrals to a licensed child care and development program, contact your local child care resource and referral agency. A map and listing of the 10 Southern California Child Care Resource and Referral Agencies is included as an insert.

Using Your Local Child Care Resource and Referral Agency
Selecting a child care and development program that will help your child develop and learn and meet the needs of your family is an important job. Because you want the best for your child, you will want to spend time learning as much as you can about your choices – whether you prefer a center-based or family child care home – and visiting different child care and development programs before you enroll your child. In addition, you will need to think about the cost of care and how you will pay for it or find out if you qualify for help paying for your child care. Most importantly, you will want to consider the quality of experiences for you and your child.

As a first step to beginning your search for a child care and development program, you will want to contact your local child care resource and referral agency.

The map with contact information of the 10 Southern California Child Care Resource and Referral Agencies is included as an insert. For child care and development referrals, contact the agency closest to your home, school, or work.

My Child Care Checklist
Documents that may be required to enroll my child in a child care and development program:

- Copy of my child's original birth certificate.
- Copy of my child's current Immunization Record (update annually).
- Income verification.
- Current address verification (examples: driver’s license/identification card, utility bill, etc.).
- Recent photos of my child.
- Copies of social security cards for my child and me.
- Physical form (provided by child care program) with current TB clearance completed by my child's doctor.

Information I may need to provide when I enroll my child in a child care and development program:

- My child's name, date of birth and sex.
- My contact information, including my name, address, and telephone numbers (e.g., home, work, school, and/or cell).
- Name, telephone number and address of persons who can take responsibility for my child if I cannot be reached (e.g., my parents, my child's father/mother, etc.).
- Any information about my child’s food restrictions and allergies.
- Contact information, including the name, address, and telephone number of my child's doctor in case of emergency.
- Record of current medications, including the name of the doctor, and instructions for providing the medications to my child.

The documents required to enroll your child may vary based on the type of program for which you are eligible, if subsidized, and/or wish to enroll your child.
HEAD START PROGRAMS

Head Start is a free, part-day (3½ hours) comprehensive child development program for low-income and disabled preschoolers ages three to five years old living in the local community. Head Start generally operates from September to June. Families most in need, including families at risk and/or in crisis, four year old children, and children with disabilities, receive priority for enrollment. Comprehensive services include social services, health, mental health, nutrition, and parent involvement. Contact your local child care resource and referral agency for referrals to a Head Start Program in your community. You may also receive referrals to Head Start Programs by calling, toll-free, 1-877-PRE-K-KID (773-5543).

What is a Child Care Resource and Referral Agency?
- Gives families referrals to a range of licensed child care and development programs for children from birth to 12 years old.
- Provides resources and referrals to low-income families eligible for child care subsidies.
- Offers written materials on several topics, including selecting a child care and development program that is right for you, as well as brochures on child development topics, such as separation, toilet training, discipline, and more. Ask about their brochures and other materials and how you can receive them.

How to Request Referrals
Before you call the resource and referral agency, think about the type of care you would prefer, such as center-based or family child care. You may decide that you would like to visit both types of programs to help you make your decision. Also, think about whether you want your child in a program near your home, school, or work.

When you call, the resource and referral specialist should ask you for the following information:

- Age of your child
- Your home ZIP code
- Hours child care is needed
- Why you need child care (attending school, working, participating in job training, child's enrichment and school readiness)
- Where you want the care (city and ZIP code) – near your home, school, work, etc.
- Special considerations (such as whether your child has disabilities or special needs, you need transportation, you need help paying for care/subsidized child care; your family speaks a language other than English)
- Types of care you are most interested in (center-based or family child care home; full-day or part-day)
A Special Needs Advisory Project (SNAP), located at each child care resource and referral agency, assists parents of children with special needs from birth through 12 years of age in accessing quality child care and development programs and connecting to other community resources.

Based on your answers, the resource and referral specialist will provide you with a list of referrals. Typically, you will receive the following information:

- Name of the centers and/or family child care providers
- For centers, the address and telephone number
- For family child care, the closest major cross streets and the provider’s telephone number

Most referrals will be provided to you on the telephone the day you call. In some cases, the resource and referral specialist may call you later the same day or later in the week with a list of referrals.

It will be up to you to contact the centers and/or family child care home providers to conduct telephone interviews and/or schedule times to meet with them and visit their programs. If you are not satisfied with any of the programs that you have contacted and/or visited, call the resource and referral agencies for additional referrals.

Paying for Care

The cost of child care and development services generally depends on the age of your child and the hours of care needed. Be sure to let the resource and referral specialist know if you think you may qualify for subsidized child care. In addition, you may ask for referrals to programs that offer subsidized child care or scholarships to families unable to afford the full cost.

Funding for subsidized care is limited and scholarships depend on the fundraising efforts of the individual center. Ask the resource and referral specialist to add your name to the Los Angeles Centralized Eligibility List (LACEL), which is a waiting list of families eligible for subsidized child care. More information about the LACEL is also available at www.childcare.lacounty.gov.
Other Resources
In addition to your local resource and referral agency, information on finding and selecting high quality child care and development services is available from the National Association for the Education of Young Children at www.naeyc.org and the National Association for Family Child Care at www.nafcc.org. The Web sites also post listings of licensed centers and family child care homes that have received national accreditation for meeting high quality standards.

CHOOSING A QUALITY CHILD CARE AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM: A CHECKLIST

Finding a child care and development program that is right for you and your family is a process that will take time, lots of time. But in the end it will be worth it! As a parent, you want to choose a program that makes sure your child is safe, loved and cared for and works with you to promote your child’s growth and development. Ultimately, the best programs are those in which the provider or teacher builds a warm and loving relationship with your child as the foundation for your child’s growth and learning and supports and works with you as your child’s first and primary teacher.

This checklist is a list of items to consider when visiting prospective child care and development programs. When you schedule your visit, arrange to spend an hour or two to get a sense of the program. Be sure to observe and ask questions. And use this checklist. The more items you check based on what you see or learn by asking questions during your visit, the more you will know whether you have found a quality program.

- Is the program licensed? Ask to see a copy of the license.
- What is the ratio of children to caregivers? Check the license for capacity and ages.

1 The following checklist is provided with the permission of Connections for Children. Retrieved from www.cfc-ca.org on July 9, 2007.
Is there an open door policy that welcomes your visits, participation, and input?

Does the caregiver encourage you to share appropriate information about your child and family? How is ongoing communication encouraged between parent(s) and caregiver?

What is the program philosophy? Does the caregiver respect your concerns as a parent(s) and your philosophy, values, and goals for your child?

Does the caregiver listen closely to children and use positive language when talking to them? Do you feel comfortable with this person and the way she/he interacts with you and the children?

What are the expectations and rules for children’s behavior? Does the caregiver use positive and non-punitive discipline methods? Ask and look for examples.

What type of child care training has the caregiver received?

Does the caregiver talk with the children and play with them on the floor?

Observe the indoor and outdoor environments for safety and cleanliness.

Are materials easily available to children? Are toys and materials appropriate to the development levels of the children? Is there enough variety to facilitate development in all areas?

How is the day structured? Are there scheduled times for free play, structured activities, meals, quiet time, naps, and outdoor play?

Are daily or weekly activity plans posted? What types of activities are provided, both child-initiated and adult-initiated? Does your child bring home of variety to things to show you?

What is the policy on watching television and using the computer?

Early Head Start Programs

Early Head Start is a free, comprehensive program for low-income pregnant women, infants, and toddlers from ages birth to three, including young children with disabilities. Services may be provided in the home of the family, a licensed family child care home, and/or a center. Program staff also help families access health, nutrition, and social services. For more information about Early Head Start and enrolling your child, call the program located closest to your home.

- Do the children seem happy, secure, and stimulated? How would you feel in this particular program, and group of children?
- Is your child eager to go there each day? Does she/he talk positively about friends, activities, and the caregiver? Is your child happy when you arrive, even reluctant to go home?

FINDING HELP PAYING FOR CARE

Locating affordable, quality care is a challenge for most families. It is of particular concern for low- to moderate-income families, many of whom may be eligible for government-subsidized care. Unfortunately, there is not enough funding to help all of the families that meet the income criteria for a child care and development subsidy. The following is a listing of three programs that are intended to help connect eligible families with subsidized child care.

Los Angeles Centralized Eligibility List

The Los Angeles Centralized Eligibility List (LACEL), with funding from the California Department of Education (CDE), was created to help connect low-to moderate-income families with child care and development programs that offer subsidies as funds and openings become available. The LACEL is a countywide list of low-income families who need help paying for child care and development services.

Subsidized child care and development programs include:

- Full-day child care and development programs for children ages birth to five
- Half-day preschool programs for children ages three and four
- Before and after school programs for children up to age 13
- Alternative Payment Programs that subsidize child care for families who can select among a variety to child care settings, such as centers, family child care homes, or friends and relatives.

To register on the LACEL, contact your local child care resource and referral agency.

See insert for the map and listing of the 10 Southern California Child Care Resource and Referral Agencies.

Cal-Learn
If you are participating in Cal-Learn, you are eligible for child care services. Cal-Learn is a mandatory program for CalWORKs participants receiving cash assistance, under 19 years of age, are pregnant or parenting, and have not completed high school. Cal-Learn participants are required to enroll in high school or an equivalency program. For more information about Cal-Learn, including the eligibility requirements and the services available under the program, contact the County of Los Angeles Cal-Learn toll free number at 1-800-511-2070 or call your local Adolescent Family Life Program (see page 13).

Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS) Child Care Assistance Program
The DCFS Child Care Program serves “at risk” children and families. Teen parents under the supervision of DCFS and living with their birth parent, a relative, or in a basic licensed foster home may be eligible for free child care for up to six, 12, or 18 months. For more information, speak with your Children’s Services Worker (CSW) to decide whether child care is a necessary part of your case plan. If so, your CSW will submit a child care referral form to the DCFS Child Care Unit.

ADOLESCENT FAMILY LIFE PROGRAMS
Adolescent Family Life Programs (AFLPs) provide case management services to pregnant and parenting teens. Among the services provided by AFLPs are: ensuring teens are able to meet their educational and career goals; promoting healthy family relationships; and assisting teens and their children with access to health and social services, including resources for finding and selecting a child care and development program.
